Dear Architects and Urban Designers,

I recently began working with the architectural rendering firm, Ravelin3D, on a modest student housing project in San Diego. While I'd rather keep this talented firm a secret, I feel compelled, for the sake of our profession and the built environment in general, to go public and let you all know that this highly skilled, efficient, responsive and reasonably priced firm would be a powerful asset to your business. It has truly been a pleasure working with Ravelin3D. They have not only brought to the project their technical expertise, but also a design sensibility which, these days, seems to be a rare commodity. With their superior services, Ravelin3D will without a doubt become increasingly in demand, so please remember, when we're all jockeying for a scheduling slot with Ravelin3D, I have first dibs.

Very Truly Yours

Doug Simon
